Getting By In Tligolian

Roppotucha Greenberg

The City-State of Tligol is ruled by dictators, holds monthly public executions and is haunted by a benign, fishing, giant, but by and large the inhabitants are content, and the food is amazing. The perfect place for a city break, just as long as you don't want to leave. Ever.

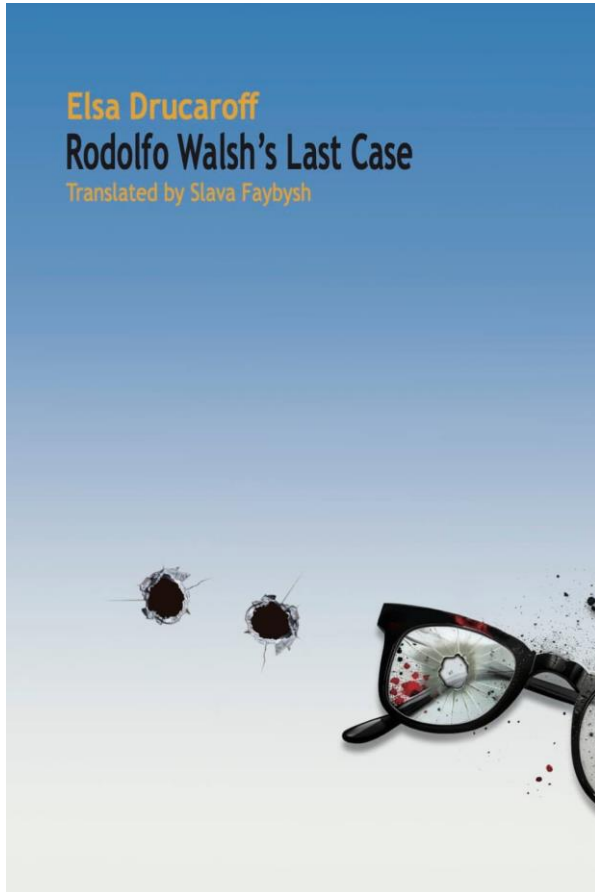

'A yearning fable of loss and love and all the bits in between; a miasmic dreamwalk one part Haruki Murakami, one part China Miéville, but, in the end, its own hypnotic, brilliant thing.'

Val Nolan co-author of Spec Fic for Newbies

A genius and trickster, apparently dies at the Battle of Königgrätz in the Austro-Prussian War of 1866. However, he has not died and instead is able to procure the brain of Isaac Newton to replace his own. Subsequently, he uses Newton's knowledge of the laws of nature to overcome them, using a strange device to travel faster than the speed of light, and also to photograph the past. BEAR SEASON

GEMMA FAIRCLOUGH

'Bloody hell! BEAR SEASON is terrific. Fairclough's debut refuses easy answers and categorisation, just like the two women who become entangled in this dark story about a missing British PhD student in the Alaskan wilderness. Simply addictive.'

Ally Wilkes, author of All the White Spaces

'Mystery and longing intertwine seductively in this compelling exploration of three women's minds.'

Zoe Gilbert, author of Folk and Mischief Acts
